Internal Audit — Regulatory Relations Team

Goldman Sachs

200 West Street, New York, NY 10282

Re: Internal Audit, Regulatory Relations Team, Vice President, New York

Dear Hiring Team,

The Regulatory Relations Team is the liaison between Internal Audit and the regulators — overseeing the examination process, coordinating requests and responses, and tracking the undertakings the firm makes. I have sat in every chair that seat faces, and I would like to bring that to Goldman Sachs.

The regulator's chair. I began as a bank examiner with the Florida Office of Financial Regulation, running CAMELS safety-and-soundness examinations of state and national banks alongside federal banking regulators and writing the workpapers behind formal enforcement actions. I know what an examiner is actually asking for when a request arrives, which responses close a question and which ones open three more, and what a credible undertaking looks like from the side that has to accept it.

The regulated firm's chair. At JPMorgan Chase I made the submissions. I ran Resolution & Recovery Planning across 50+ stakeholders in Legal, Treasury, and Operations, delivering regulator-ready filings to the Federal Reserve and FDIC against statutory deadlines, and led CCAR forecast validation over a $2.6T balance sheet under SR 15-18. Coordinating a regulatory response across functions that do not report to you, to a date that does not move, is the daily work this role describes.

The auditor's chair. At Citi Internal Audit I tracked the undertakings. I led consent-order audit execution across 15+ business units — monitoring management's progress against commitments made to regulators, authoring issue-closure packages and sustainable-closure evidence that quality assurance and external regulators accepted, and escalating where remediation was not credible. I reported the results to executive management and the Board Audit Committee, which is the senior-management reporting the posting asks for.

The process, not only the relationship. The posting wants someone to own and re-engineer the team's processes and keep a centralized warehouse of requests, responses, and commitments. I consolidated 500+ legal-entity data sources into a governed repository with ownership and lineage, producing regulatory filings at 99.8% accuracy; I automated reconciliations that cut manual review ~40%; and I built a workpaper assistant in Python that cut review time ~35%. I re-engineer the process rather than staff it.

The honest gaps. I have not held a role titled Regulatory Relations — I have done the work from three seats around it. I have not worked at Goldman Sachs, and my regulatory experience is U.S. federal and state; supporting a European office would be ramp on the specific regulators, not on the discipline. I would rather say that now than have it surface later.

I am in Newark; 200 West Street is a direct commute. I would welcome the conversation.

Sincerely,

Yasir A. Malik
