SUMMARY

Twenty years designing, implementing, and challenging control frameworks in regulated banking at JPMorgan Chase, Citi, and the Florida Office of Financial Regulation. Has sat on all three sides of a supervisory control: as the examiner who tested it, as the first-line risk-control manager who built and ran it, and as the internal auditor who opined on it. At JPMorgan, owned the first-line control framework for Treasury & CIO capital activities, ran Resolution & Recovery Planning across 50+ stakeholders in Legal, Treasury, and Operations into Federal Reserve and FDIC submissions, and led CCAR forecast validation over a $2.6T balance sheet. At Citi, led consent-order issue closure across 15+ business units with evidence accepted by external regulators. Consistent method: understand the business activity first, define the control and the supervisor's expectation second, build the monitoring third — and represent it in the governance forum in language the regulator recognises.
