Re: Vice President, Finance & Business Management and Transformation

Dear Hiring Team,

I was a Program Manager in JPMorgan's Commercial & Investment Bank, then a Capital Controller and a first-line Risk Control Manager who acted as the business liaison between the business managers and the control functions. Since then I have led AI transformation inside Citi's Internal Audit function. Business management sits exactly where that experience meets, and I would like to bring it back to JPMorgan.

I turn strategy into a plan people follow. I ran Resolution & Recovery Planning across 50+ stakeholders in Front Office, Finance, Legal, Operations and Technology, none of whom reported to me. That meant governance forums, milestones, dependencies, escalation and executive readouts, delivered to the Federal Reserve and FDIC on statutory deadlines.

I have delivered AI into operations, not just talked about it. At Citi I defined the AI tooling roadmap, built the tool, drove adoption with its users and measured the benefit: about 35% faster review cycles. I then wrote the governance framework it ran under. Adoption, benefits realization and value measurement are the parts most transformation programs skip, and they are the parts I own.

I support the CFO's agenda. As a Capital Controller I found $180 million of capital optimisation and took it to the CFO as a decision paper. I build executive materials in PowerPoint and Excel that state the trade-offs, the decision required and the recommended action.

I would welcome a conversation about the business agenda you are driving and where I can help deliver it.

Sincerely,

Yasir A. Malik
