Re: Controls Governance & Insights Control Manager — Vice President (Req. 210784462)

Dear Hiring Team,

I started my JPMorgan career as a Program Manager in the Commercial & Investment Bank, spent four more years as a Capital Controller and first-line Risk Control Manager, and have since led Internal Audit work at Citi. I would like to come back to CIB, and this role is the one where all three seats are useful at once.

I know what a senior forum needs from a page. At Citi I reported audit results across 15+ business units to executives and the Board Audit Committee. The discipline was always the same: what changed, why it matters, the decision required, the risks and controls in play, and who owns the next action. A good governance deck answers those five questions before anyone asks them, and I write to that standard.

I have run the production side under real deadlines. At JPMorgan I ran Resolution & Recovery Planning across 50+ stakeholders in Legal, Treasury, Technology and Operations, none of whom reported to me. That meant collecting inputs, chasing gaps, tracking actions and approvals, and getting a submission to the Federal Reserve and FDIC complete and accurate on a statutory date. I also know CIB's control functions from the inside, which shortens the time it takes to find the right material owner when something does not reconcile.

I check the numbers before a leader sees them. As a Risk Control Manager I performed the reconciliations, completeness checks and trend reviews behind capital reporting, and automated enough of them to cut manual review by about 40%. At Citi I maintained issue, finding and remediation logs through a consent order and authored the closure evidence that regulators accepted. I escalate early and precisely, because a wrong number in a leadership deck costs more than a late one.

I use generative AI the way your posting describes. I built a retrieval-augmented assistant at Citi that drafts and summarises review findings; it cut cycle time by roughly 35%, and every output was validated by a person before use. Faster drafting, with judgment kept where it belongs.

I would welcome the chance to discuss how I can support the forum cadence and raise the quality of CIB's governance reporting.

Sincerely,

Yasir A. Malik
